JUDGE HINMAN GRANTS

DIVORCES IN SIX CASES

Four wives and two husbands were granted divorces by Judge George E. Hinman when he heard their cases, which were in the uncontested list, tried before him in the superior court here on Friday morning. Desecration, intolerable cruelty and adultery figured in grounds for divorce.

The following were the cases disposed of:

On the grounds of desertion since April 25, 1914, Mabel Grace Bookwith of New London was granted divorce from Ralph Malone Bookwith of New London and was given the custody of a son aged 5 and a daughter aged 5. The couple was married February 14, 1911.

Intolerable cruelty since July 21, 1915, the date of the marriage, in the grounds upon which Alice Tubbs Perkins of New London sued for divorce from Harold J. Perkins of East Lyme. The decree will be entered when affidavit as to military service has been filed with the court. The mother asked custody of a four year old daughter but this was not granted by the court.

Edward D. Seivinger of New London sued for divorce from Irene Moran Seivinger of East Lyme on the grounds of adultery committed between January 1, 1915 and August 1, 1919 at Groton and elsewhere with divers persons unknown. The couple was married on April 29, 1912.

Louise C. Duels Rodman of Stonington charged intolerable cruelty since December 25, 1918 against her husband, Pelleg A. Rodman of Stonington and was given a divorce from him with custody of an eight year old son. The marriage took place on November 28, 1907.

Desecration since Nov. 25, 1915, secured for Rebecca Partello Nye of Stonington a divorce from Frederick S. Nye of Leyard whom she married on December 11, 1912.

Desecration was also the grounds upon which Samuel Horowitz of Hanover was granted a divorce from Fannie Slossberg Horowitz, now of parts unknown. They were married on July 11, 1914, and the desertion was alleged to have taken place in August of the same year.

Cleveland, rector of the Episcopal church, was an army chaplain in world war, and Rev. Frederick A. MacDonald was in the U. S. C. A. service in France.

Matthew Sullivan, formerly of Westerly, while crossing Bank street in New London was struck by a fast moving motorcycle and severely injured. Chairman Abram L. Atwood of the state board of public roads of Rhode Island, has notified Congressman Stivers, that construction and maintenance work in connection with the highways of the state, threatens to be held up by failure to receive asphalt shipments. Mr. Stivers has appealed to the interstate commerce commission and was advised that the matter would be taken up with the Pennsylvania Railroad company, with a view to getting the asphalt laden cars on their way to destination.
